STICKY FINGERS

Caddy Daddy has been making golf travel bags for more than a decade, but it was watching college and pro football that provided company officials inspiration to expand their golf business. Seeing running backs and receivers wearing stylish, tacky gloves, they thought this might carry over to golf. After early testing showed the football-glove material was too thick and heavy, company officials came up with a thinner variation that maintained its durability to create the Talon golf glove ($20). The top consists of micro-suede and mesh, and the palm is made from a tacky synthetic material. Ventilation holes keep your hands from getting too hot. The Talon's tackiness can be revived by cleaning the glove with a damp towel or putting it in the washing machine. —Keely Levins
